man, who, during his tack, if he had built never so much, it would have accresced to the heritor, without remedy or recovery of the expenses.

THE LORDS found no allowance should be granted.

In this same process, it was alleged, The defender ought to have compensation for such debts as were owing to him by the said Andrew Brysson, setter of the houses to him. It was answered, That the pursuer being heritor and master, ought to have his duty fully paid to him, without respect to any debt owing to the defender by Brysson. It was replied, That the tacksman being the setter of the houses to the defender, he was the defender's master, to whom, if the defender had made formal payment, he would have been assoilzied; now, compensation is payment by the law, or the equivalent.

THE LORDS allowed compensation, the debt being proven.

Fol. Die. v. 1. p. 166. Gilmour, No 97. p. 74.

Compensation proponed by a debtor against an assignee was found not relevant upon a debt of the cedent's, purchased by the debtor before the date of the 'assignee's right, but not intimated to the cedent until he was denuded by the assignee's intimation to the debtor.

Ferguson against More.

In the case, Ferguson contra More, the Lords found, That compensation should not be granted against an assignee upon a debt of the cedent assigned to the suspender; unless intimation had been made to the cedent, before the charger's intimation of the assignation made to him by the cedent. See No 116. p. 2650.

CROKAT against RAMSAY.

No 120. Compensation found relevant against a gratuitous assignee, tho' the liquidation was after intimation.

DONALD CROKAT, as assignee by John Donaldson to a bond of L. 405 granted to him by David Ramsay, charges thereon. He suspends on this reason, that the cedent was debtor to him for four years aliment. It was answered, Non relevat, unless the aliment had been liquidate before intimation of the charger's assignation, but it is now only liquidate by a subsequent decreet, and is not receivable against the assignee. It was replied for the suspender, That whatever might be pretended of a subsequent liquidation against an assignee for causes onerous, yet this assignation is not for causes onerous, and the cedent, Donaldson, being good-brother to this assignee, the narrative of the assignation will not prove the cause onerous, unless it be proven aliunde, and the benefit of assignees their being in better case than the cedent, though he can only pursue as his procurator, is introduced by custom in favours of commerce, where the cause is onerous, but where the assignation is gratuitous, the assignee is in no better case than the cedent, and the cedent's oath will prove against him, and so must a posterior liquidation. 2do, The assignation being fraudulent betwixt confident persons, to exclude this liquidation, the cedent having nothing, and the assignee knowing of the aliment before the assignation, the same ought to be received against him. 3tio, The liquidation is only to modify the quota due for
