No 202. derstood that the said infeftment was made in respect of the said obligation, and so the said obligation dedit causam infeodationi, wherefore she could not come in the contrary thereof, she receiving profit of it; and also, a woman could have no more privilege than a pupil, and if a pupil give a reversion of lands, without that reversion, he would be compelled to keep the reversion, et per consequentiam, the woman was in the same case. And also the practique of Scotland was, that all such obligations are made without the presence of the husband to the effect that they should not afterwards allege the same to be done through fear of the husband; in respect of the which reply and reasons, the said exception was repelled.

Fol. Dic. v. 1. p. 401. Maitland, MS. p. 205.

1679. February 21.

COCKBURN against BURN.

No 203.

FOUND (which was never decided before) that in the wife's deeds of administration of her own proper goods not falling under communion, the husband's consent is not necessary.

Fol. Dic. v. 1. p. 401. Fountainball, MS. Stair.

*** See this case, No 29. p. 5793. and No 32. p. 5794.

1680. Jun

June 18. BAILLIE of Torwoodhead against LADY LETHEM.

No 204. Found that a wife, though living separately from her husband, has no power to oblige herself or contract debt, but can only do those necessary deeds which tend to the administration of her separate patrimony.

In the charge given by Baillie of Torwoodhead to the Lady Lethem his mother upon her bond, the LORDS declared they would hear this point in their ; own presence. If a bond granted by a woman cloathed with a husband was so null as that it neither bound her person nor her means, where she lived separate from her husband, (as the Lady Lethem did from Posso,) though not divorced; and where she, by an act of Privy Council, had the free disposal of her former jointure, or of a part of it, or had an aliment which neither her husband's jus mariti, nor his creditors, could reach or affect. Some thought the law, (so far as her allowance exceeded a precise aliment) should allow her to contract debt on these jointures, and she might sell her victual, and enter into contract for delivery thereof, upon which undoubtedly the buyer would get execution against her; else it would impede commerce, and none would meddle with her. whereby she might starve. And though the S. C. Velleianum annulled womens obligations, yet there was a threefold disparity : 1mo, The Senatusconsult. only secured wives against their intercessions as cautioners for others. 2do, It only related to borrowed money; whereas the bond charged on, is for furnishing necessaries to the house. 3tio, It did only strike against strangers ; whereas this hond is by the mother to her own son, who having a bulimia et appetitus ca-