ARRESTMENT.

No 145. in allowing diligences to go out against a debtor, that regard is had to his prefent circumstances. An inhibition offered against a man of an opulent fortune, for a small debt, is often stopped as an effect of malice; and if Sir John Meres, or any other of the creditors to the Company, had proceeded to arrestment, when their credit was entire, and no other creditor doing diligence, it is not improbable the judges might have interposed; but as it is believed, the parties themselves will not take upon them to affirm that such is their case, there appears to be neither law nor equity for the demand made in the petition.

HERIOT against Forbes.

WHERE an arreftment is laid on, upon a depending action for a great fum libelled at random, the event of which process, and extent of the true claim, is uncertain, the LORDS, ex arbitrio, modify a fum, upon finding caution for which, they find the arreftment loofeable; and did so in this case.

No 147.

SUSPENSION having been obtained of a decreet-arbitral, after arreftments had been used thereupon, and the suspender applying for letters of loofing the arreftments, the Lodrs were of opinion, that wherever a decreet is suspended, arreftments on it are loofeable, though laid on before the suspension; and therefore granted warrant for letters of loofing, but upon new caution.

Answered: Intimation of loofing the arreftment had not been made to the arrefter; therefore the payment unwarranted: For that, 1mo, The will of letters of loofing arreftments uniformly is, that the executor thereof intimate the loofing of the arreftment to the arrefter, and deliver to him a copy. containing the day of loofing of the arreftment, witneffes prefent thereat, and cautioner found therein; otherwife that the arreftment ftand and remain unloofed.
