

1740. July 8.

Dr GLEN, and OTHER SURGEONS of EDINBURGH, against DEACON CUNNINGHAM.

No. 3.

E. HAY's decret-arbitral having provided that no member of a corporation of Edinburgh, having a benefice or lucrative office from the town or trade, should have any vote in the corporation; and the Town of Edinburgh, instead of paying annually to the Surgeons of the Poor, their account of medicines having altered the method, and settled 600 merks yearly on the Poor's Surgeon, and given the office to William Mitchell; the Lords found that he was within the terms of the decret-arbitral, and could not vote; but afterwards they repelled an objection against Mr Monro, as falling under the same clause, as being Professor of Anatomy in the University, and his salary paid out of the Town's gift of two pennies on the pint of ale.

---

1743. June 3. BAXTERS of EDINBURGH against SHIELLS.

No. 4.

CORPORATION of Baxters, whether they could by their act or contract bind the individuals to employ one particular person to carry their grain and flower to and from the mills; and whether we could pass a suspension of their contract, so far as it might affect the members dissenting? The bill was passed.

---

1749. November 30. MALTMEN of GLASGOW against ROBERT TENNENT.

No. 5.

AN innkeeper in Glasgow, who brewed his own ale, baked his own bread, and butchered his own meat, not bound to enter himself with these Corporations, or to desist from brewing or baking, &c. Vide No. 6. infra.

---

1749. November 30. MALTMEN of GLASGOW against JOHN LUKE.

No. 6.

BUT another innkeeper, who had entered with them, and swore in the usual form to observe their statutes, found liable to pay the small dues imposed by the Corporation for their poor. Vide No. 5. supra.