CASES ON APPEAL FROM SCOTLAND.

1719-20. March 1.

" The faid report being again read by the clerk and agreed to, " the following order was made:

" It is ordered by the lords fpiritual and temporal in parliament " affembled, that the faid Earl of Aboyne, his tutors and cura-" tors do forthwith make payment to the faid Katherine Lyon of " the fum of δ_{11} . 4s. $4\frac{1}{2}d$, for her cofts and expenses in the feve-" ral suits and processes mentioned or referred to in her faid ap-" peal, and in respect of further costs fince incurred, upon her " feveral applications for obtaining relief upon the matters com-« plained of in her faid petition."

In the Dictionary of Decisions, vol. 1. p. 439. Implied Discharge and Renunciation, many decisions are stated for the doctrine, that after extracting a decreet expences are not to be allowed: but that doctrine in the present appeal was reversed.

Cafe 38. John Goddard, Gentleman, • Appellant; Respondent. Fountain-Sir John Swinton, Baronet, hall, 73 July 1709.

30th August 1715.

Foreign Decree - The effect of a judgment of the Court of King's Bench, when founded upon by a pursuer against a desender in the Court of Session. Homologation.-The defender had in England been furrendered by his bai!, who were discharged; and the defender executed an instrument, importing that the judgment should not be released by fuch difcharge; this instrument found not to homologate the judgment.

THE appellant's mother Urfula, as administratrix of his late father Robert Goddard, deceased, in October 1700 commenced an action against the respondent before the Court of Session for payment to her of the sum of 4041., with interest since the year 1680; stating the circumstances of the case to be:

That in 1675, the respondent being at London and dealing as a merchant, he and the faid Robert Goddard and nine other persons executed articles of agreement under their hands and feals to become partners in a ship called The John and Thomas of London, and her cargo, to the value of 3800%. On a voyage to Guinea; and all the parties, under a penalty of 60001., covenanted to account with and pay each other for such proceeds of the cargo as should come to each partner's hands:

That by the faid articles Mr. Goddard was declared to have four parts of 32 in the faid ship and cargo; and the ship, proving successful in her voyage, returned to the port of London in 1677, and the disposal of the cargo was committed to the respondent, as cashier and agent for the partnership : he received thereon to the value of 54031. 9s. 4d., whereof 6751. 8s. 8d. was Mr. Goddard's share; and the respondent having paid him 2851. 8s. 8d., there remained due to him 3901.:

That

CASES ON APPEAL FROM SCOTLAND.

That after Mr. Goddard's death, the faid Urfula, his widow and administratrix, brought an action of covenant upon the said articles, in the Court of King's Bench against the respondent, for the faid whole fum of 6751. 8s. 8d. received by him, fetting forth in her declaration the covenant in the articles, and alleging in fact, that the respondent had been appointed cashier of the said cargo, and had received out of the fame 54031. 9s. Ad., of which the faid fum of 6751. 8s. 8d. was her late husband's share:

That the respondent demurred generally to the said declaration, thereby admitting the facts stated to be true; and after several adjournments the demurrer upon argument being over-ruled, a writ of inquiry was issued, which was executed; and the jury upon stating the account found the respondent indebted to the deceased 3901., which sum they allested for damages to the administratrix; and thereupon, in Hilary term 1680, judgment was figned and entered up for her against the respondent for the said 3901. and for 141. costs, in all 4041. sterling:

That the respondent being unable to fatisfy the faid debt, prevailed on Mrs. Goddard not only to forbear suing to execution, but also to discharge his bail; and accordingly; on the 28th of February 1680, she, by an instrument under her hand and seal, (which was drawn and prepared by the respondent and attested by himfelf,) taking notice of his inability to pay the debt fo re-. covered against him, declared that his bail should stand discharged, and that they might be at liberty to vacate their recognizance: and the respondent by a writing indorsed on this instrument, and figned by him and one of the bail, declared "that no clause or " expression therein mentioned is intended, or shall be construed " or meant to intend the release or discharge of the judgment " within mentioned, obtained by the within Urfula Goddard. " against the faid John Swinton; or is it intended or meant there-" by, in any ways or means howfoever or whatfoever, to preclude " the faid Urfula Goddard from obtaining any advantage upon the " faid judgment against the faid John Swinton for the recovery " of her debt due from the faid John Swinton to the faid Urfula " Goddard :" That the respondent being restored to his estate in Scotland (upon the prospect of which Mrs. Goddard had given him forbearance), but refuling to make payment of what was owing by him, the faid Urfula's action concluded that the faid judgment of the Court of King's Bench might have the authority of the Court of Selfion interposed thereto, and that Sir John might be decerned to pay the faid 404!. Sterling with interest, and that all execution might be directed thereon. And in this action, the faid Urfula produced (what she said was) an original of the articles of agreement, with the English judgment, and instrument executed upon the difcharge of the respondent's bail. Before any determination in this matter, the faid Urfula died; and the appellant having administered to her, and also confirmed : the faid debt in Scotland, revived the action against the respondent in 1704. Various steps were afterward's taken in this action.

tion, and in February 1708 it was remitted to the Lord Ordinary to make a state thereof: the points then in question before his lordship were,

- 1st, Whether the judgment obtained in England should be taken as res judicata, and should be admitted as a sufficient proof of this debt without any other evidence.
- 2d, Whether the inftrument for difcharging the refpondent's bail, and his declaration indorfed upon it, should be deemed an homologation of the judgment; and
- 3d, Whether annual-rent ought to be paid for this debt vel ex

paclo vel ex lege. 'This last point did not come under the appeal. The Court, upon a report by the Lord Ordinary, on the 13th of July 1709, "Found that the aforefaid declaration doth homo-" logate and exclude all objections against the judgment;" to which they adhered on the 26th and 28th of July. But the refpondent having presented another petition, in which he contended that former decisions of the Court were in his favour, and stated that the appellant's father had never figned the articles of copartnership; the Court allowed a re-hearing, and afterwards, in June 1710, "found that the declaration granted by " the respondent did not homologate and exclude objections " against the judgment;" to which they adhered on the 13th of February 1711. And on the 3d of December 1713, the Court " sustained the judgment of the Court of King's Bench, the ap-" pellant inftructing that Goddard was copartner, and that Sir " John was cashier and had intromission to make him liable for " Goddard's proportion." The appeal was brought from " Teveral interlocutors of the ' " Lords of Council and Sellion of the day of June 1710, the " 13th of February 1711, and 3d of December 1713."

Heads of the Appellant's Argument.

The judgment ought to be allowed to be a fufficient proof of the matters now directed to be proved over again; and the rather fince it appears from the judgment, that the refpondent by demuring generally had admitted and confeffed thefe very facts, inter alia, to be as they are fet forth in the declaration, viz. That the appellant's father was co-partner, and that the refpondent was cafhier of the faid cargo, and had received the proceeds of it: befides which, by the articles of copartners for produced and read at all the hearings, and admitted by the refpondent to be his act and deed, it is manifest, that the appellant's father was copartner.

The inftrument for difcharging the refpondent's bail, which is attefted as a witnefs by himfelf, wherein he declared, that he was not then able to pay the faid debt; and his indorfement upon the fame, whereby he agrees, that nothing contained in that inftrument fhould releafe the faid judgment or preclude Mrs. Goddard from recovering the debt due to her thereon, are fuch acknowledgments of the faid debt, and fuch an eftablifhment of the judgment, and of the feveral material facts in the declaration 8 mentioned, mentioned, on which the faid judgment is founded, as amount to a perfect homologation or confirmation of the same.

Heads of the Respondent's Argument.

The faid declaration figned by the respondent was not a formal or direct covenant or deed of consent, nor can import a homologation of the judgment of the King's Bench; because it was not made freely and voluntarily, but metu carceris, the refpondent being then furrendered by his bail, as appears from the express words of the release, and being in the power of the faid Urfula Goddard and ready to be put in gaol; and by the constant practice of the law of Scotland, agreeably to the principles of the civil law, a deed made even directly confirming any judgment or covenant in such a case, could have been of no force, unless the justice and equity of such judgment otherwise appeared to the Court. It was upon representation of former decisions and a full argument on that subject, that the Court of Sellion were brought to alter their first sentiments, for " nihil consensui tam contra-" rium est quam vis atque metus; quem comprobare contra bo-" nos mores est. Ulpianus Lex, 116. de Reg. Juris."

As this deed was involuntary, fo it was not at all to the purpose that the appellant contends for: The respondent's bail having furrendered, or at least agreed to furrender him, they infisted to be released, and this the faid Ursula agreed to, in consideration of the payment of 5 shillings: but she being anxious to referve to herfelf the benefit of the faid judgment against the respondent, she obliged him to declare, that the release of his bail was not intended to discharge the judgment or any advantage against the respondent for payment of the debt. The point in view was not to confirm the judgment, but to declare what was the intent of the release. The validity and equity of this judgment depends upon this point, amongst others, viz. whether the faid Robert Goddard was a copartner with the respondent, and others, and this point the respondent disputes, and says, that Robert Goddard never figned these articles: if this be the case, though a party may by homologation supply any defect of a deed which depends upon himself only, yet no deed of the respondent's could have made Robert Goddard a partner in the whole flock without consent of the whole partners; and it was upon this ground, among others, that the Court pronounced the interlocutor of the 13th of February 1711. There is no law nor precedent, binding or obliging, the fovereign court of any country to put in execution the decree or fentence of any court of another country; and in the year 1680, when the judgment of the King's Bench was given, as well as in the year 1700, when the action was commenced before the Court of Seffion, the kingdom of Scotland was separate from England as much as any other kingdom of Christendom. Even now after the union, it remains still equally distinct in all things that concern the laws of civil right, and the limits and extent of jurisdiction M 3 tion by express stipulation; the governing maxims, therefore, par in parem non babet imperium vel potestatem, and extra territorium jus dicenti impune non paretur must take place as much as ever, and the judgment of the King's Bench can no more take place in Scotland, than those of the Court of Sellion can take place in England.

But even supposing the judgment of the King's Bench to have the same effect and force out of England, that the appellant contends it ought to have, yet the interlocutor of the 3d December 1713 is most just; for the appellant did not insist only upon his judgment, but likewise upon a counterpart of the articles of copartnership which he produced. The whole cause was thereby by him submitted to the Court; and if the respondent had any thing to object to the faid Goddard's being a partner, the Court ought to have received it. The appellant, even oftener than once, prayed for leave to make further probation, and insisted that his father was copartner, and that the respondent was cashier and received his effects.

It makes no difference, that the articles were in relation to English business, and executed in England by perfons residing there, because, the objection in this case arises from the separation of jurisdiction, which is juris publici: And the only question is, whether the judgment of the King's Bench does bind the Court of Session to proceed, without enquiring into the cause, against a person and his property in Scotland, which are under the direction and protection of the law and jurisdiction obtaining there. After hearing counsel, It is ordered and adjudged, that the said petition and appeal be dissified this House, and that the interlocutors complained of in the said appeal be offirmed.

For Appellant, Rob. Raymond. Sam. Mead. For Respondent, David Dalrymple. J. Jekyli.
