

count the corporation of that craft preferred to the magistrates a complaint against him.

In a process of advocacy, it was Pleaded for Elisabeth Macmartin: The statute of 3d Geo. III. has enacted, 'That all such officers, soldiers, &c. who have been employed in the service of his Majesty, and also the wives and children of such officers and soldiers, may set up and exercise such trades as they are apt and able for, in any town within the kingdom of Great Britain,' &c. Now, as it is obvious that none of the handicrafts which come under the exclusive privileges of corporations either in England or Scotland, are such as women can be presumed 'apt or able' to perform with their own hands, the privilege thus conferred on the wives and children of soldiers, must be that of employing other persons to execute work bona fide for their behoof. The defender is therefore well intitled to exercise this trade by means of her husband.

Answered: In the preamble of the statute, those soldiers who are to enjoy the privilege bestowed by it, are described as at least 'apt and able' to make use of the respective trades; but according to the defender's plea, their wives and children would be more privileged than they themselves. It is evident besides, that were this interpretation of the statute to be sanctioned, it would give such opportunities for collusive devices, that the whole benefit of incorporated trades would be annihilated.

The LORD ORDINARY found, that the defender had no title to the privilege claimed by her; and

The Court adhered to that interlocutor, on advising a reclaiming petition, with answers.

For the Corporation, Drummond. Alt. Dean of Faculty. Clerk, Menzies.
Stewart. Fol. Dic. v. 3. p. 105. Fac. Col. No 120. p. 232.

1793: February 19. MUIR and Others against MACBAIN and Others.

No 120.

THE LORDS found, That disbanded soldiers had no right to exercise a plurality of crafts within burgh.

See The particulars, No 111. p. 2004.

1795: December 17.

JAMES MANSON, Treasurer of the Guildry, and JAMES MILLER, Procurator-fiscal of the Dean-of-Guild-Court of Perth, against JAMES MACDONALD.

JAMES MACDONALD, a journeyman wright, married the daughter of a soldier, who, after her marriage, set up a small shop in Perth, in which she retailed bread, barley, and small groceries.

No 121.
The daughter of a soldier, although married to a person not a member of the